Statement of the Case	1
1. Present Public Uses of Proposed Site	2
2. Destruction of Existing Public Uses Would be Inevitable	4
3. Exchange of Property is the Basis of this Suit and Required Dismissal of Condemnation Petition	7
4. The Record Shows that the Site which Government Officers Selected would not Provide Suitable Accommodations for Courthouse, Post Office and Custom House as Required by Act of Congress of May 25, 1926, Cited and Relied upon by Petitioner	11
5. Government's Only Site Agent Recommended Selection of a Different Site	16
Argument	17
I. The matters at issue in the within cause were correctly decided by the Circuit Court of Appeals when it affirmed the judgment of the District Court in favor of Respondent and against the Petition, on the ground that the Act of May 25, 1926, c. 380, 44 Stat. 630, as amended by the Act of July 1, 1939, 53 Stat. 1426, 1427, Title 40 U. S. C. 341, under the record in this case, did not confer upon the Public Works Administrator and the Postmaster General the power asserted in this case by Petitioner to condemn the particular land in question	17
II. Petitioner abandons the theory upon which it tried this case in the courts below in its Petition for Writ of Certiorari filed herein, and we respectfully submit it is without merit and should be denied	19
III. The decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals that under the undisputed facts in this record, the Act of Congress relied on by the Petitioner did not confer upon the Public Works Administrator and the Postmaster General the power asserted in this case, is not in conflict with the decisions of any other Circuit Court of Appeals, nor with any decision of this Court	23
IV. The Record supports the finding of the District Court that the Administrator of Federal Works Agency and the Postmaster General acted arbitrarily and capriciously in selecting the proposed site	31
V. The City of Cape Girardeau has no authority to contract to convey land involved	37

Page

VI. The rule is also well settled that if the decision of the lower courts was correct the petition for writ of certiorari should be denied, even though the court below may have based its ruling upon a wrong ground or had not based its ruling on all the facts in the record which would have justified additional grounds for the decision 40

VII. Government's authority to dispose of present Post Office building and site is restricted by Acts of Congress 40

VIII. Petitioner misconceives the effect of the decision of the Courts below 14

APPENDIX

Stipulation regarding an agreed Statement of Facts offered in evidence in its entirety in this case.

Item I. Agreed Statement of Facts 1a, 2a

Item II. Description of the property (including a statement relating to the designation of Post Office Inspector, M. J. Deutsch as the Government's only Site Agent) 2a, 3a, 4a

Item IV. Public Library and Public Library Building 4a, 5a

Item V. Facts regarding the deeds of 1814 and 1820 ..... 5a, 6a

Item VI. Agreement to exchange property (including representations as to the right and authority of the city officials to exchange property under Sections 7210 and 7211 of Revised Statutes of Mo. 1929, (now Sections 7361 and 7362 of Revised Statutes of 1939) 6a

Item VII. Harland Bartholomew (City Plan) 7a

Item VIII. Architect (including statement that architect had no authority to make investigation of the sites and, in fact, made none) 7a

Item IX. Liaison Officer (including statements for the exchange of the property in question by H. S. Roome, Liaison Officer of Federal Works Agency) 7a, 8a

Item X. Petitions of Cape Girardeau citizens and taxpayers filed with the Joint Committee (protesting any action which would result in the property in question being used for Federal Building purposes) 8a

Item XI. Project deferred for the duration 8a

Item XII. Recommendation of the Joint Committee (showing that acceptance of the site was on the basis of an exchange of property) 8a, 9a

Item XIII. Agreement (Stipulation of Facts) does not limit right of Iska W. Carmack to offer additional further evidence 9a

The law to be applied to the facts in this case, is the law of the State of Missouri as declared by the Supreme Court of Missouri with respect to the power of the City to exchange or convey the property here involved.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

No. 812.

ON PETITION FOR WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE EIGHTH CIRCUIT

BRIEF OF RESPONDENT IN OPPOSITION THERETO.

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT.

Counsel for Respondent are not satisfied with the statement of facts presented by the Petitioner and are, therefore, submitting what we consider a more accurate and complete statement of facts contained in the voluminous record in this case.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE.

A Stipulation of an Agreed Statement of Facts was offered in evidence in its entirety on the trial of this cause and is hereinafter frequently referred to both in the Statement of the Case and the Argument. That Stipulation (R. 157-166) is printed in the Appendix, Pages 1a-10a. Petitioner has ignored the Stipulation of Agreed Facts above mentioned in its Petition for Writ of Certiorari.

The undisputed facts disclosed by the record, which Respondent believes fully support and establish the correctness of the opinion and decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals, may be grouped under the following headings:

1. Present Public Uses of Proposed Site.
2. Destruction of Existing Public Uses would be Inevitable.
3. Exchange of Property is the Basis of This Suit and Required Dismissal of Condemnation Petition.
4. The Record Shows That the Site Which Government Officers Selected would Not Provide Suitable Accommodations for Courthouse, Post Office and Custom House as Required by Act of Congress of May 25, 1926, Cited and Relied Upon by Petitioner.
5. Government's Only Site Agent Recommended Selection of a Different Site.

1. Present Public Uses Of Proposed Site.

Item II. of the Stipulation of Agreed Statement of Facts (R. 158, 160) (Appendix Pages 2a-4a) fully describes the present public uses of the property sought to be condemned.

The Stipulation is approved by Harry J. McNerney, Attorney for the Federal Works Agency. Mr. McNerney was called as a witness in this case by the Government. He stated he is Special Assistant General Counsel for the Federal Works Agency and assisted in preparing that Stipulation (R. 157-166) (Appendix Pages 10a).

Referring to the contents of that Stipulation, which sets forth the basis upon which the selection of the site was made in this case, Mr. McNerney testified:

> "The Court: Were there material matters before the Department on which they based a decision that are not in that agreed statement of facts or stipulation?

A. Not to my knowledge. (Emphasis added.)

"The Court: Is it your knowledge from an examination of the files in the Department with which you are connected that this stipulation that you entered into covers material facts upon which the Department based its decision?

"A. That is right." (R. 541-542.)

The present public uses of the proposed site are fully and adequately stated in the opinion of the Circuit Court of Appeals, as follows:

> "The land sought to be taken by the United States was conveyed to the inhabitants of the Town of Cape Girardeau, predecessor of the City of Cape Girardeau, in 1820 to be held forever by the grantees as a public park for the use and benefit of the inhabitants of the town and the owners of adjacent lots. The City of Cape Girardeau has no power to convey any part of the public park nor to devote it to any use other than that specified in the deed under which it has been held by the City and its predecessor for more than a century. Board of Regents of Normal School District No. 3 v. Painter, 102 Mo. 464, 14 S. W. 938, 940; Carmack v. United States, supra (135 F. 2d 196). That part of the park now sought to be condemned is occupied by the public library building of Cape Girardeau and by the local courthouse. The entire second floor of the court house is used by the court of common pleas, a court of record with jurisdiction in civil and criminal matters. The first floor is occupied by the offices of the City of Cape Girardeau, including the mayor, city engineer, city clerk, city council, and city attorney, and also by the clerk of the court of common pleas. The basement of the building is used largely for storage space for the files and records of the common pleas court. The library building is used as a meeting place for all local civic organizations. The property described in the Government's petition for condemnation is a tract measuring 280 x 240 feet near the center of the park." (R. 660, 661.)

The record shows that the evidence on the second trial as to the present public use of the particular land described in Petitioner's Second Amended Petition in condemnation, as above quoted, is the same as the evidence on the first trial (135 F. 2d. 196, l. c. 198) and is the identical property described in Item II. of the said Stipulation of Agreed Facts (R. 159, 160). (Appendix Pages 2a-4a.)

At Page 200 of the first opinion in this case, (135 F. 2d. 196-200), the Court said:

> "The record shows without dispute that the property has been devoted to public use, not only because the owners chose to do so, but because they were required by the deed of dedication so to do. There was a legal obligation to maintain the property for the designated public purpose."

2. Destruction of Existing Public Uses would be Inevitable.

In affirming the judgment of the District Court on the second trial, the Court below correctly stated the facts shown by the records, as follows:

> "The District Court found on substantial evidence that taking by the Government of that part of the park sought to be condemned would result in the destruction of the use of the remainder of the tract as a park; would require the wrecking of the common pleas court building and the removal of the public library building and a public monument; and would materially interfere with the proceedings of the court of common pleas and with the transaction of city business in the courthouse building, and also with the plans for a civic center prepared by an expert employed by the local chamber of commerce for that purpose. The court also found that there was no necessity for the taking of the land described in the petition for condemnation; that other sites in the City of Cape Girardeau were available for the proposed Federal Project; that the failure to secure the land in this proceeding would not result in the failure of the Federal project; and that the park was not selected by the Federal Works Administrator and the Postmaster General as a site for the Federal building upon considerations of Federal necessity or advantage, but because of the erroneous belief of these Federal Agents that the City of Cape Girardeau had authority to exchange the park site, together with the buildings thereon, for the present Federal building in Cape Girardeau and the land on which it is situated.

"We cannot say that any of these findings of fact by the District Court are clearly erroneous. On the contrary, each of them was, in our opinion, required by the evidence. By this evidence it was shown that the United States owned a postoffice, courthouse, and customhouse building in the City of Cape Girardeau, located on the most prominent corner of the city, opposite the leading hotels, convenient to the largest patrons of the postoffice, and nearer the center of free mail delivery in the City than any other available location. It further appears that adjoining the site on which the present Federal building stands are tracts of land which the United States may acquire by purchase or condemnation at reasonable cost, and which, together with the site presently owned by the United States, affords sufficient area for any necessary additions to the present building as well as for the construction of a new building. The site now owned by the United States, together with the adjoining available tracts, was selected by the only representative of the Postoffice Department and the Federal Works Agency who made a study of the relative merits of available sites in Cape Girardeau as the most desirable from the standpoint of the United States." (R. 661, 662) (151 F. 2d. 881, 882.)

In this connection it should be noted that the Public Library site was not understood by the Committee to be included in the negotiations for exchange of property. Mr. Meyers, Fourth Assistant Postmaster General, in referring to this matter testified, in part, as follows:

"Q. Do you know whether the original plan for the condemnation of a part of the Park and courthouse contemplated the condemnation of the site of the Public Library Building?

A. My recollection is that it didn't contemplate the condemnation of the Public Library site." (R. 137)

Louis Hecht, a prominent merchant on Main Street at Cape Girardeau, and the owner of some ten store buildings on Main Street, in referring to the condemnation of the Library site and building, testified, in part, as follows:

"Q. When did you first learn from any source that the Public Library Building was included in this condemnation? * * * *

A. When I first learned that the library is included in the condemnation proceedings?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. I never knew that the library was included. I have always been under the impression that if the post office is located where the court house is now that it would not affect the library, that the library would not be affected in any way, it would be left as it is." (R. 249)

The Stipulation of Agreed Facts—Item IV.—referring to Public Library and Public Library Building, a part of property sought to be condemned, contains the following statement:

"It is agreed by and between the parties hereto that there is now and has been for many years past continuously maintained a public library building in which the said City of Cape Girardeau, Missouri, now and for many years past has continuously maintained a public library for the general public, both as a public library and also additionally as a meeting place for civic organizations such as garden clubs, rose societies, historic societies, and other civic and public gatherings." (R. 157, 160)

Undoubtedly referring to a referendum petition signed by over 2000 citizens of Cape Girardeau protesting against an exchange of property (R. 444), in addition to the protests set out in the Report and Recommendations of M. J. Deutsch, the Government's only Site Agent, (R. 167-204) said Report states:

"Because of the divergence of opinion, the Chamber of Commerce in a recent meeting decided not to make any official comment as to a certain location. The president of the Chamber of Commerce decided not to give an opinion as to his preference.

"The postmaster, who has no financial or personal interest in any of the locations, but who is conscientiously interested in civic development, regards the government-owned site as an outstanding location but recommends the city park as first choice because this trade would allow the city to retain a good improvement and allow the Federal Government to secure a site with attractive surroundings. As a second choice, in the event that a trade with the city is not feasible, the postmaster prefers the present government-owned site." (R. 188, 189) (Emphasis added.)

The Deutsch Report and Recommendations closes with this recommendation:

"For First Choice I recommend that the present government-owned site be retained and that the adjoining property, Site 2 offered by H. Bremermann, be purchased for $15,000, and that a counter offer be made to the owner of Site 3, Ella M. Drum, to purchase this site for $600.

"This recommendation is made because it is believed that the present location is the most outstanding site in this city, and because of the numerous limitations on all of the other competing sites which would prevent an advantageous or desirable transaction." (R. 189) (Emphasis added.)

3. Exchange of Property is the basis of this suit and required Dismissal of the Condemnation Petition.

In referring to the basis of this suit, the Court below correctly stated the undisputed facts in this record, as follows:

"The evidence also established that, prior to the institution of the condemnation proceeding, certain agents of the Public Works Administrator and officers of Cape Girardeau had conceived the idea of an exchange of the park property for the present Federal building and the land on which it is situated, and that negotiations between them to that end had culminated in the proposed agreement between them for the exchange of property. As stated above, this proposed agreement was the moving cause for the selection of the park as the site for the Federal building. When it developed that the City of Cape Girardeau was not only without power but was prohibited by Missouri law from carrying out the proposed contract and thus violating the trust under which it held the park property, the present proceedings for condemnation of the site were instituted as a means for accomplishing indirectly an exchange of properties which could not be directly made. This exchange was to be consummated eventually by the acceptance by Cape Girardeau of the present Federal building and the land on which it is situated in payment for any award against the United States in the condemnation proceedings. The facts set out above are sufficient, we think, to distinguish this case from C. M. Patten and Co. v. United States, 9 Cir. 61 F.2d 970; United States v. Certain Parcels of Land, D. C., 30 Fed. Supp. 372, and like decisions.

"The Government points to no specific legislative grant of authority to take the land involved in this proceeding such as was present in Oklahoma v. Atkinson Co., 313 U.S. 508, 534; State of Minnesota v. United States, 8 Cir., 125 F.2d 636, 639. For the authority asserted in the present case the Government relies upon the General Acts of Congress of May 25, 1926, 44 Stat. 630; Reorganization Plan No. 1, par. 301-303, effective July 1, 1939, 53 Stat. 1426, 1427; 40 U.S. C.A., par. 341, conferring upon the Federal Works Administrator authority to acquire by purchase, condemnation, or otherwise in the District of Columbia and in the several States sites and additions to sites, and cause to be constructed thereon adequate and suitable buildings for the accommodation of various departments of the Government. We think it may not be said that Congress, in conferring upon certain administrative officials of the Government power to select cities and sites in cities to be used for the erection of buildings to be used by the United States for postoffices, courthouses, and customhouses, intended to authorize these officials to select as a site to be condemned for this purpose one not only occupied by a State or one of its political subdivisions for a governmental purpose of equal rank, but also held in trust for this specific purpose for which the land was being devoted, with no power to authorize another or different use, and where the proposed taking by the United States would, as the District Court has found in this case, materially interfere with necessary local governmental functions." (R. 662, 663) (151 F. 2d 881, 883.)

Walter F. Meyers, Fourth Assistant Postmaster General, testified on behalf of the Government in part, on examination by the Court, as follows:

"The Court: Did you reach your conclusion on the theory the City would convey title to this land?

"A. Yes, sir; I read the cases that had been presented, and I was of the opinion that the opposing view was not correct. I had practiced law for thirty years myself and thought that might mean a little something." (R. 131)

The Stipulation of Agreed Facts expressly recites that the authority of the City Officials to enter into the agreement for an exchange of properties is based upon Sections 7210 and 7211 of the Revised Statutes of Missouri, 1929 (now Sections 7361 and 7362 Revised Statutes of Missouri, 1939).

Item VI. of the Stipulation of Agreed Facts reads, as follows:

"Item VI. Agreement to Exchange Property.

"That the City Officials of the City of Cape Girardeau, Missouri, represented to the Joint Committee considering the selection of site for Post Office, Custom House and Federal Court Building at Cape Girardeau, Missouri, that said City Officials desired to negotiate with the United States Government for the exchange of the Court House Park, City Offices, Common Pleas Court House, and Public Library Building, in exchange for the old United States Post Office Building located in said City of Cape Girardeau, Missouri;

"That said City Officials claimed and represented that they based their authority to sell or dispose property upon Sections 7210 and 7211 of the Revised Statutes of Missouri, 1929 (now Sections 7361 and 7362 of the Revised Statutes of Missouri, 1939).

"That the alleged agreement between the City Officials of the City of Cape Girardeau, Missouri, and the United States of America for the exchange of the old Post Office Building and site for the property sought to be condemned is based upon said representations as to the right and authority of the City Officials to sell or dispose property under said Sections 7210 and 7211 of the Revised Statutes of Missouri, 1929 (now Sections 7361 and 7362 of the Revised Statutes of Missouri, 1939)" (R. 162, 163) (Emphasis added.)

The sections of the Missouri Statutes relied upon, as hereinabove referred to, read as follows:

"Sec. 7361. May Sell And Convey Commons.—Where any city, town or village in this state hath a common annexed to it, the trustees or body corporate of said city, town or village shall have authority to sell or convey, by deed in fee simple, all the common annexed to said city, town or village. (R. S. 1929, Sec. 7210.)

"Sec. 7362. May Pass Ordinance And Perform Other Acts Necesary To Effect Sale.—The trustees, or body corporate, of said city, town or village, is hereby given full power and authority to pass any laws, by-laws, ordinance or other necessary provisions regulating and effecting the sale of said commons, or to perform, or cause to be performed, all acts that are, or may become, necessary to carry into full effect the sale of said commons by said city, town or village. (R. S. 1929, Sec. 7211.)"

Other evidence in the record showing that the purpose of the condemnation proceedings was to effect an exchange of properties is set out and discussed in the argument.

4. The record shows that the site which Government officers selected would not provide suitable accommodations for Courthouse, Post Office and Custom House as required by Act of May 25, 1926, cited and relied upon by Petitioner.

The Statute of May 25, 1926, which Petitioner cites and relies upon as the Statute Involved (Petition p. 3) was enacted, "To enable the Federal Works Administrator to provide suitable accommodations * * * for court houses, post offices, immigration stations, custom houses * * *," and the record in this case shows that the land sought to be condemned would not "provide suitable accommodations" for the Federal courthouse, post office and custom house at Cape Girardeau, and the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals was not only authorized but was required by the statute and the undisputed facts in the record.

The Government architect Hart showed the lack of availability of the land in question when he testified:

> "Q. You made the statement a little while ago that all that would be left on the east side of the building would be terraces. Aren't all those terraces included in the Government acquisition down to Spanish Street?
> A. No, sir, the new property comes up to the terraces. The terraces are out beyond. The property lines come about to here. The terraces are down beyond that; (Indicating)." (R. 369.)

It is conceded in this record that the description of the land in question referred to by the witness Hart, is accurately described with respect to its elevation and boundaries as set out in the opinion by the District Judge, (55 F. Supp. 555, 556) as follows:

> "The Park is bounded on the east by Spanish Street. Spanish Street is 40 ft. below the level of the proposed site. To go from Spanish Street to the proposed site it is necessary to ascend approximately 60 steps. The east line of the proposed building site is near the top step, leaving approximately 100 feet between the east line of the proposed site and the east line of the Park site. These strips of land thus remaining on the north, east and west outside of the boundary lines of the proposed site are not sought by plaintiff and are to remain Park property. (See Gov. Exhibit No. 5.)" (United States Exhibit 5, R. 88, 89, and United States Exhibit 11, R. 498, 499.)

The Report and Recommendations of Deutsch (the Government's only Site Agent) show the "disadvantages" of the particular land in question in the following language:

> "This location is somewhat removed from the center of carrier delivery and the center of population, and is definitely not in the trend of future business expansion or growth. A new building here would face a side street with only residential property on the opposite side. In order to take advantage of symmetrical attractiveness with respect to surrounding streets, views, and buildings, it may be necessary to forego advantages, with respect to necessary approaches and driveways." (R. 177.) (Emphasis added.)

Comparing the particular land described in the petition with other sites, the Report and Recommendations of the Government's only Site Agent concludes:

> "It is my opinion that the present Government-owned site and adjoining ground is the most outstanding location in the city. Any of the other sites would be merely a compromise to avoid the demolition of the present federal building. While due regard must be given to public sentiment, it is obvious that the city park site, while it might provide an attractive setting, would present a problem to develop for practical utilization. The third choice would make a fairly suitable site, especially in the event that the present federal building would remain, but the lack of a bid from Miss Greene and the sentiment in her favor against condemnation is a serious obstacle." (R. 185.) (Emphasis added.)

As to the site recommended by the Government's only Site Agent as "First Choice", in preference to the particular land sought to be condemned, the Deutsch Report and Recommendation states:

> "This (present Post Office site) is an excellent corner location facing the most prominent intersection in the city and on the principal business street. The center of the business section is not definitely ascertainable because of the diversion caused by the three business sections, but this corner is generally regarded as being the center of the business district. This location is about two blocks north and three blocks east of what might be designated as the center of delivery and the approximate center of population. It is directly across the street from the bus depot, the largest office building in the town, and the two principal hotels which are convenient for sessions of the Federal Court.

"The location is also conveniently situated with regard to the Southeast Missourian Publishing Company and the Missouri Utilities Company, two of the largest mailers in the city. Regardless of the fact that the trend of the business district is toward the west on Broadway, this would remain the principal and the most prominent intersection because of the character of the buildings now standing. The purchase price of the Bremermann property is reasonable, and the strip owned by Drum can no doubt be purchased for approximately $600." (R. 177-178.)

The record shows that the only investigation or consideration of the suitability of the land in question as an available, suitable and fitted site was the investigation and recommendation made by M. J. Deutsch, the Government's only Site Agent. Bearing on the selection and character of the land in question, we here call attention to the following undisputed evidence in this record.

Walter Meyers, Fourth Assistant Postmaster General, testified, on cross-examination, as follows:

"Q. Now was there any information assembled with respect to the selection of a site for the post office at Cape Girardeau after the suit had been reversed by the Circuit Court of Appeals in this proceeding?

A. Not that I know of." • • • (R. 136.)

Mr. Meyers further testified:

"Q. And your files, to your knowledge, have no papers of any kind showing any action taken by Postmaster-General Walker in his capacity as Postmaster-

General prior to the signing of this paper (Government Exhibit 4) on June 10, 1943?

A. I think that is correct.

Q. And that is also true of General Fleming?

A. I don't know, but I assume so.

Q. Do you know whether there was any information furnished to the Postmaster-General or the Administrator of Public Works Agency, in the form of a plat showing the property sought to be condemned in this proceeding, before the architect H. A. Tucker visited Cape Girardeau?

A. I don't know.

Q. Do you know whether the original plan for the condemnation of a part of the Park and court house contemplated the condemnation of the site of the Public Library Building?

A. My recollection is that it didn't contemplate the condemnation of the Public Library site." * * * (R. 137.)

As hereinabove set out under Subdivision 3 of this statement, Mr. Meyers testified that his Committee reached its conclusion regarding the exchange of property on the theory the City would convey title to this land. The Government not only fails to consider but wholly ignores the Stipulation of Agreed Facts, Report and Recommendations of the Government's only Site Agent, and all other facts in this record, which conclusively show that the site selected is not available, suitable and fitted for the Post Office site.

The record clearly shows that Fourth Assistant Postmaster-General Meyers was mistaken in testifying that Mr. M. J. Deutsch was not the only Government Inspector to make an examination of the sites at Cape Girardeau and recommendations to the Joint Committee.

On cross-examination, Mr. Meyers testified:

"Q. Now the Government's only site investigator in this case was Post Office Inspector M. J. Deutsch?

A. No, that is not correct. Mr. Betterly came out to go over this matter, Mr. Witman came out, and two architects came out to go over it." (R. 128.)

Mr. J. F. Betterley, referred to by the Fourth Assistant Postmaster-General as one of the persons investigating the site, testified that he never at any time acted in the capacity of a Site Agent. Note the following question and answer by Mr. Betterley in this connection:

"Q. And you made no record for the Committee?
"A. That is right." (R. 354.)

The testimony of E. R. Witman, referred to in Mr. Meyers' testimony, showed that he was Fiscal Manager and had nothing to do with the inspection of Post office sites.

The Stipulation of Agreed Statement of Facts shows that H. S. Roome prepared the form of proposal for the exchange of properties, but made no recommendation regarding the merits of the property sought to be condemned, or any other property as a site for the Post Office. (R. 163, 164) (Item IX, Stipulation of Agreed Facts, Appendix, Pages 7a, 8a.)

The Stipulation of Agreed Facts further shows that H. A. Tucker, referred to by the Fourth Assistant Postmaster-General as making an investigation of the sites at Cape Girardeau, had no authority and was given no instructions to make investigation of sites at Cape Girardeau, and had no authority to make any recommendations to the Joint Committee regarding the selection of a site at Cape Girardeau, and in fact made none. (R. 163) (Item VIII, Stipulation of Agreed Facts, Appendix, Page 7a.)

The lack of information on the part of the agents of the Government regarding the physical facts at the Court House site is disclosed on the cross-examination of R. S. Hart, (one of the architects referred to by the Fourth Assistant Postmaster-General), as follows:

"By Mr. Hasson:

Q. Mr. Hart, you stated your duties were to go down there and locate the building on the site that was to be secured for this particular site. Did you have anything to do with recommending the site for selection by the Postmaster-General and the Federal Works Administrator?

A. No, sir."

5. Government's only Site Agent recommended selection of a different Site.

The Stipulation of Agreed Facts in this record shows:

That Post Office Inspector, M. J. Deutsch, was designated as the Government's only Site Agent to visit the City of Cape Girardeau, for the purpose of investigating and recommending to the Joint Committee considering the selection of the Post Office, Custom House and Federal Court Building site at Cape Girardeau, an available, suitable and fitted site for the construction and maintenance of such Building at Cape Girardeau;

That the said Post Office Inspector, M. J. Deutsch, did, after considering the facts pertinent to the site selection for the construction and maintenance of a Post Office, Custom House and Federal Court Building at Cape Girardeau, make a report to said Joint Committee wherein he, as the Government's only Site Agent, recommended as his First Choice a site other than the public property sought to be condemned. (R. 158, 159, Item II.)

Bearing upon the question of suitability of site in question, we here call attention to Report and Recommendations of the Government's only Site Agent hereinabove quoted from his report (ante p. 12-13) of this Brief.

In the first opinion of the Circuit Court of Appeals, which was unanimous, the Court found in favor of this Respondent and against the Petitioner herein. On remand the trial Court found all of the issues in favor of this Respondent and against Petitioner herein. The Petitioner appealed from that judgment and the Court below, in a unanimous opinion, affirmed the judgment of the District Court, and Petitioner now asks this Court for a writ of certiorari to review the undisputed facts in this record for the fourth time.

ARGUMENT.

I.

The matters at issue in the within cause were correctly decided by the Circuit Court of Appeals when it affirmed the judgment of the District Court in favor of Respondent and against the Petitioner, on the ground that the Act of May 25, 1926, c. 380, 44 Stat. 630, as amended by the Act of July 1, 1939, 53 Stat. 1426, 1427, Title 40 U.S.C.A., under the record in this case, did not confer upon the Public Works Administrator and the Postmaster General the power asserted in this case by Petitioner to condemn the particular land in question.

While the Petitioner contends that, although the Circuit Court of Appeals states that it did not consider or pass upon the question whether the action of the Government officials was capricious or arbitrary, yet the Petitioner devotes a large portion of the Petition to the contention that the opinion of the Circuit Court of Appeals is based upon that question, and the Respondent believes that if the opinion of the Court of Appeals be considered as based on that issue, the record in this case fully supports the conclusion that the action of the Federal officials was arbitrary and capricious, as was found by the District Court, and the Respondent is willing to have this question now before the Court considered on that basis.

The Act of May 25, 1926, cited and relied upon by Petitioner, provides, in part:

> "To enable the Federal Works Administrator to provide suitable accommodations * * *, courthouses, post offices * * *, and other public buildings of the classes under the control of the Federal Works Agency in the states, territories and possessions of the United States, he is hereby authorized and directed to acquire by purchase, condemnation or otherwise, such sites and additions to sites as he may deem necessary

> * * *. When a building is about to be constructed on a site acquired prior to May 25, 1926, and such site is found by the Federal Works Administrator to be unsuitable for its intended purpose, he is hereby further authorized and empowered to acquire a new site in lieu thereof by purchase, condemnation, exchange, or otherwise, and except in case of exchange to dispose of the present site by public sale and to execute the necessary quit claim deed of conveyance: * * *" (Emphasis added)

In referring to this Statute, under the undisputed facts in this case, the Circuit Court of Appeals said:

> "* * * The facts set out above (in the opinion) are sufficient, we think, to distinguish this case from C. M. Patten and Co. v. United States, 9 Cir., 61 F. 2d 970; United States v. Certain Parcels of Land, D. C., 30 Fed. Supp. 372, and like decisions."

Continuing the reference to the lack of authority to condemn, under the record in this case, the Court (R. 663) said:

> "The Government points to no specific legislative grant of authority to take the land involved in this proceeding such as was present in Oklahoma v. Atkinson Co., 313 U. S. 508, 534; State of Minnesota v. United States, 8 Cir., 125 F. 2d 636, 639. For the authority asserted in the present case the Government relies upon the General Acts of Congress of May 25, 1926, 44 Stat. 630; Reorganization Plan No. 1, Secs. 301-303, effective July 1, 1939, 53 Stat. 1246, 1427; 40 U. S. C. A., Sec. 341, conferring upon the Federal Works Administrator authority to acquire by purchase, condemnation, or otherwise in the District of Columbia and in the several states sites and additions to sites, and cause to be constructed thereon adequate and suitable buildings for the accommodation of various departments of the Government. We think it may not be said that Congress, in conferring upon certain administrative officials of the Government power to select cities and sites in cities to be used for the erection of buildings to be used by the United States for postoffices, courthouses, and customhouses, intended to authorize these officials to select as a site to be condemned for this purpose one not only occupied by a State or one of its political subdivisions for a governmental purpose of equal rank, but also held in trust for the specific purpose for which the land was being devoted, with no power to authorize another or different use, and where the proposed taking by the United States would, as the District Court has found in this case, materially interfere with necessary local governmental functions.

"If the Act relied on by the United States should be held to confer upon the Public Works Administrator and the Postmaster General the power asserted in this case, it would subject the States and their political subdivisions to an interference with necessary local governmental functions at the decision of Federal administrative officials, with possible unfortunate and unnecessary conflicts between State and Federal authority. We find no basis in the Act relied on by the Government for attributing to Congress any such intent." (R. 663, 664.)

II.

Petitioner abandons the theory upon which it tried this case in the courts below in its Petition for Writ of Certiorari filed herein, and we respectfully submit it is without merit and should be denied.

Respondent will here discuss the three questions presented in the Petition (Petition p. 2) in the order there set out.

The first question presented by Petitioner reads as follows:

"1. Whether, under the statute authorizing the Federal Works Administrator, acting jointly with the Postmaster General, to condemn for post offices such sites 'as he may deem necessary,' a petition to condemn property already devoted to public use may properly be dismissed on the grounds that, in the opinion of the court, the selected site is not necessary for the public project because other sites are available, condemnation of the selected site will interfere with local governmental functions, and the property is held in trust for the specific purpose to which the land is being devoted."

This question ignores the Stipulation of Agreed Facts (R. 157, 160) (Appendix P. 1a-10a.)

The present public uses (referred to in Question 1) of proposed site are stated in the first opinion by the Circuit Court of Appeals in this case (135 F.2d 196, l.c. 198), and that is the identical description of present public uses of proposed site found in the Stipulation of Agreed Facts (Appendix p. 2a-4a). The court below also set out a full description of the present public uses of the proposed site in its opinion in this case (151 F.2d. 881-883). (R. 660, 661)

The second question presented by Petition (P. 2) reads as follows:

> "Whether, under the facts of this case and particularly in the light of the approval of local public officials and a majority of local voters, the selection as a site for a federal post office of property used for a city park and courthouse was arbitrary and capricious."

In the second question presented the Petitioner takes the position that the proposed exchange of properties prohibited by Missouri law is not arbitrary and capricious in the light of the approval of local public officials and a majority of local voters. The District Court in referring to the matter of local approval, said:

> "We note there was offered in evidence the proceedings leading up to and the holding of an election on the Park site. The evidence is of little value to the issues. Only one site was submitted to the voters and that was presented as a question of the City making the trade discussed heretofore. Such procedure could not give legal effect to a transaction the City was powerless to perform." (55 Fed. Supp. 555-563.) (R. 600, 632) (Emphasis added.)

Furthermore, the record in this case reveals that there was a referendum petition signed by over 2000 citizens of Cape Girardeau protesting against proposed exchange of property (R. 444), in addition to the protest set out in the Deutsch Report and Recommendations.

The District Court, in referring to this matter, said:

> "* * * It is doubtful if any site is ever selected that is acceptable to all residents of any town or city. Certainly the evidence shows a very sharp division of opinion in Cape Girardeau on the selection of the site here under consideration. This has been the case from inception of the project and will, no doubt, continue to the end. * * *" (55 Fed. Supp. 555, 563.) (R. 600, 616.) (Emphasis added.)

The third question presented by Petitioner (P. 2) reads as follows:

> "Whether a taxpayer, property owner, and heir of the grantor to the city of the property sought to be condemned, has standing to object to the taking when she has no property interest in the land."

In the third question thus presented as to the right of Respondent to assert the defenses alleged in her answer, this matter was disposed of on the first appeal and accepted by Petitioner and is not now properly a question before this court. (Carmack v. United States, 135 F. 2d 196, l. c. 199.)

The position of Petitioner with respect to the issues involved and the procedure adopted after remand is set forth in a letter from Assistant Attorney General Littell, to the United States Attorney at St. Louis, Missouri, dated July 23, 1943, in which Mr. Littell, among other things, said:

> "You are advised that the Solicitor General has decided that application should not be made for a writ of Certiorari." * * * * (R. 94)

> "It will be recalled that the Circuit Court of Appeals held that right to determine what is a public use and when there is a public necessity for taking specific property is, in the first instance, a legislative rather than a judicial question, but whether in carrying out the purpose of Congress the officer has acted capriciously or arbitrarily is a judicial question, and that this issue should have been determined by the District Court. This Department feels that this issue should be raised by the defendant, testimony taken if the Court desires it, and the question decided by the Court. It also appears to this Department that the best evidence to offset the contention that the selection was arbitrary or capricious is the report made by M. J. Deutsch, dated August 20, 1940." * * * * (R. 94, 95).

Let it be observed that on the second trial of this cause in the District Court the theory of the Petitioner as to the framing of the issues involved, and the taking of testimony, was adopted by the Petitioner. The second trial was conducted in all respects as directed by the Petitioner consistent with the first opinion of the Court of Appeals.

In the third question (Page 2 of petition) presented as to the right of Respondent Carmack to assert the defenses alleged in her answer, this matter was disposed of on the first appeal, and accepted by Petitioner and is not before this Court.

Carmack v. United States, 135 F. 2d. 196, l. c. 199;

Mott v. Morris, 249 Mo. 137; 155 S. W. 434, 438.

In support of the Respondent's above proposition we here call attention to the following authorities:

"Questions presented by a petition for certiorari should not be answered where based upon a state of facts not presented by the instant case."

General Talking Pictures Corporation v. Western Electric Company, 305 U. S. 124, 125; 83 L. Ed. 81, 82 (Headnote 1).

"It is elementary that the court is not bound to determine questions which have become academic."

"Ford Motor Company v. National Labor Relations Board, 305 U. S. 364, 375; 83 L. Ed. 221, 230, 231.

All proceedings on the second trial of this case after remand (R. 658) as stated in 151 F.2d. 881, are consistent with the first opinion of the Circuit Court of Appeals, remanding this cause for further proceedings consistent with that opinion. Carmack v. United States, 135 F. 2d 196. The Petitioner accepted the Findings of Fact stated in the first opinion of the Circuit Court of Appeals. (135 F.2d 196), and also accepted the law governing the right of the Government to condemn the particular property described in the condemnation petition in the circumstances presented in this case as declared by the Court of Appeals on the first appeal. (135 F.2d 196.) And Petitioner proceeded with the second trial of this cause in the District Court after remand (R. 600-618) reported in 55 Fed. Supp. 555, in a way entirely consistent with said opinion (135 F.2d 196), reversing and remanding this cause for further proceedings.

The specifications of errors to be urged by Petitioner (P. 9) are merely a restatement of the questions presented and are also void of merit. A discussion of the specifications of errors is merged in the discussion of the undisputed facts in this case and the law applicable thereto.

III.

The decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals that under undisputed facts in this record, the Act of Congress relied on by the Petitioner did not confer upon the Public Works Administrator and the Postmaster General the power asserted in this case, is not in conflict with the decisions of any other Circuit Court of Appeals, nor with any decision of this Court.

There is no conflict between the decision in this case and C. M. Patten and Co. v. United States, 9 Cir., 61 F. 2d. 970; United States v. Certain Parcels of Land, D. C., 30 Fed. Supp. 372, and like decisions.

The Petitioner contends that the decision of the Court below is in conflict with decisions of other Circuit Courts of Appeals and also in conflict with decisions of this Court governing the right of petitioner to condemn for a Post Office site the particular property involved in this case.

The facts in those cases were entirely different from the facts in this case. It is necessary for Respondent to call attention to the undisputed facts in this voluminous record which show conclusively that an illegal and void agreement for the exchange of properties is the basis of this suit.

The reason or excuse for selecting the site described in the Government's Petition for Condemnation is not based upon the merits or advantages of the particular land selected, but is bottomed entirely upon an offer by the City Officials for an exchange of property (R. 162) (Appendix P. 6a.)

The Court below in referring to this matter, among other things, said:

> "* * * As stated above, this proposed agreement (for an exchange of properties) was the moving cause for the selection of the Park as the site for the Federal building. When it developed that the City of Cape Girardeau was not only without power, but was prohibited by Missouri law from carrying out the proposed contract and thus violating the trust under which it held the park property, the present proceedings for condemnation of the site were instituted as a means for accomplishing indirectly an exchange of properties which could not be directly made. This exchange was to be consummated eventually by the acceptance by Cape Girardeau of the present Federal building and the land on which it is situated in payment for any award against the United States in the condemnation proceedings." (United States v. Carmack, 151 F. 2d. 881, 883) (R. 662, 663.)

In referring to the authorities relied upon by Petitioner in the Court below and in this Court, the Court of Appeals said:

> "* * * The facts set out above are sufficient, we think, to distinguish this case from C. M. Patten and Co. v. United States, 9 Cir. 61 F. 2d. 970; United States v. Certain Parcels of Land, D. C., 30 Fed. Supp. 372, and like decisions.

"The Government points to no specific legislative grant of authority to take the land involved in this proceeding such as was present in Oklahoma v. Atkinson Co., 313 U. S. 508, 534; State of Minnesota v. United States, 8 Cir., 125 F. 2d 636, 639. For the authority asserted in the present case the Government relies upon the General Acts of Congress of May 25, 1926, 44 Stat. 630; Reorganization Plan No. 1, par. 301-303, effective July 1, 1939, 53 Stat. 1426, 1427; 40 U. S. C. A., par. 341, conferring upon the Federal Works Administrator authority to acquire by purchase, condemnation, or otherwise * * *. We think it may not be said that Congress, in conferring upon certain administrative officials of the Government power to select cities and sites in cities to be used for the erection of building * * *, intended to authorize these officials to select as a site to be condemned for this purpose one not only occupied by a State or one of its political subdivisions for a governmental purpose of equal rank, but also held in trust for this specific purpose for which the land was being devoted, with no power to authorize another or different use, and where the proposed taking by the United States would, as the District Court has found in this case, materially interfere with necessary local governmental functions." (United States v. Carmack, 151 F. 2d. 881, 883) (R. 663, 664). (Emphasis added.)

The first step in this proceeding was the letter dated November 26, 1940, from the Mayor of the City of Cape Girardeau, to the Commissioner of Public Buildings, Federal Works Agency, Washington, D. C., submitting a proposition for an exchange of the property involved in this proceeding for the present Post Office and Federal Court Building in the City of Cape Girardeau. (R. 76.)

The second step in this proceeding was a letter from Neal A. Melick, Acting Administrator of Public Buildings, Washington, D. C., dated May 26, 1941, accepting the proposition of the City of November 26, 1940, for an exchange of the property in controversy for the present Federal Building and site. (R. 63.)

The third step was a letter from John N. Edy, Acting Administrator, dated September 25, 1941, requesting the Attorney General to institute proceedings for the condemnation of the particular land, stating, among other things, that:

> "Under authority of the above cited legislation this Agency entered into a contract with the City of Cape Girardeau, Missouri, for the exchange of the present Federal Building and site, hereinafter described, for a tract of land as a new Post Office and Custom House site also hereinafter described." (R. 58) (Emphasis added.)

In referring to said letter signed by John N. Edy, Acting Administrator, Paul Emmert, Assistant General Counsel, Federal Works Administration, said:

> "He (John N. Edy) acted as indicated, that day he just happened to be the Acting Administrator that day and signed whatever papers were put on his desk for signature. Mr. Edy, in addition to his other duties acted as Administrator in the absence of the Administrator at that time." (R. 290.)

The fourth step was the letter from the Attorney General to the United States Attorney at St. Louis, dated October 16, 1941, which states that:

> "It is contemplated that compensation for the taking of the land shall be made by conveyance of the present federal building to the City of Cape Girardeau." • • • (R. 92.)

Walter F. Meyers, Fourth Assistant Postmaster-General, testified in the District Court, in part, on examination by the Court, as follows:

> "The Court: Did you reach your conclusion on the theory the City would convey title to this land?
> "A. Yes, sir; I read the cases that had been presented, and I was of the opinion that the opposing view was not correct. I had practiced law for thirty years myself and thought that might mean a little something." (R. 131.)

In this connection it should be borne in mind that neither the City Officials nor the Government Agents in their negotiations for an exchange of property contemplated the destruction of the Public Library building, which Petitioner now concedes must be removed by the city on thirty days notice. (Letter of Acting Commissioner of Public Buildings. (R. 63.) See also Appendix, 5a). In referring to this matter, the Fourth Assistant Postmaster-General testified, in part. as follows:

> "Q. Do you know whether the original plan for the condemnation of a part of the Park and court house contemplated the condemnation of the site of the Public Library Building?
> A. My recollection is that it didn't contemplate the condemnation of the Public Library site." (R. 137.)

The record further discloses the fact that the architects in their report complained that the Public Library Building would detract from the new building proposed to be erected on the land in controversy. But in writing the contract for an exchange of properties a description of the real estate to be acquired included the land on which the Public Library Building is located. The plats of the Petitioner show that that land was included. (R. 77, 89, 499.)

In the light of the above facts we desire to call attention to the fact that the Petitioner in its brief at page 15 cites United States v. City of Tiffin, 190 Fed. 279 (C.C. N.D. Ohio) in support of the Petitioner's statement that:

> "The decision in the instant case stands alone in requiring specific Congressional authorization to condemn property already devoted to some public use when, in the court's opinion, the taking is not necessary, and in thus unnecessarily burdening the exercise of the sovereign power."

In the City of Tiffin case, supra, the Government sought to condemn a portion of a public alley for a post office site. The Court, at page 280, said:

> "The United States has paramount authority in the matter of taking any property within its borders for those public uses which are within the constitutional reservations to the general government."

But the Court further stated in the same paragraph, a principle overlooked by the Petitioner, as follows:

> "This does not mean, however, that no power may intervene to prevent arbitrary action, for such power certainly abides with the courts." (Emphasis ours)

In that case the trial Court was ruling on a demurrer to the petition. The concluding paragraph of the Opinion (190 Fed. loc. cit. 282) is as follows:

> "We believe that all there is in this case is for a determination by judicial consideration of the comparative importance of the contending public uses involving this plot of ground (In re Certain Land in Lawrence (D. C.) 119 Fed. 453), and that the demurrer should be overruled with exceptions."

In the Lawrence case, the Court (119 Fed., loc. cit. 456) said:

> "The legislature is the sufficient judge of the relative importance of the two uses. If there is no express legislative provision, the relative importance of the two uses is to be determined by the Court. If the later use is deemed by the Court, under all the circumstances, to be more important than the earlier, the land is taken for the later use without compensation for the loss of the earlier. If the earlier use is deemed the more important, the later is forbidden and the earlier continues.
> "We come next to the application of these principles to the facts of this case. There is here no express provision of the statute. I do not believe that the United States could, at its will, build this post office in the middle of the principal street of Lawrence or across the main line of an important railroad * * *. I doubt if it can be laid down, without qualification, that the public use of a post office is in all places superior to the public use of a park. That it is so in the case at bar appears probable from what appeared incidentally at the argument, but the issue was not then raised, and cannot be determined without further hearing, if the City desires to be heard." (In re Certain Lands in Lawrence, 119 F. 453, l. c. 466). (Emphasis added.)

The Petitioner also on page 17 says, "Arbitrary or capricious means in bad faith or according to one's own will or pleasure, without adequate determining principle," and in a note cites several cases in support. Fox Film Corporation v. Trumbull, 7 F.2d. 715, 727, does not even remotely hold or imply that "arbitrary or capricious means in bad faith." The court in that case did, however, state a principle directly applicable and significant (page 728), as follows:

> *"If the commissioner * * * abuses his discretion, and acts in an arbitrary and capricious manner, and contrary to the plain intent of the statute, there remains the right to appeal to the courts which* exists under the general principles of jurisprudence. As was said in Bradley v. Richmond, 227 U. S. 477, 483, 33 S. Ct. 318, 320, 57 L. Ed. 603, 'there would, under general principles of jurisprudence, remain the right to judicial review if the result should violate either a right secured under the law of the state or that of the United States'." (Emphasis ours.)

The Court below said there is no conflict between C. M. Patten and Co. v. United States, 9 Cir. 61 F.2d, 970, and like decisions. In referring to the inherent right of the Government to condemn, the Court, in the C. M. Patten and Co. case, supra, at Page 972, said:

> "However, this right of the Federal Government to condemn is subject to the power of the courts to intervene and prevent arbitrary and unnecessary action which must be determined by the facts in each particular case." (Emphasis ours.)

In referring to the facts in the Patten case, the Court in that case further said:

> "Recognizing, therefore, the principle thus stated and applying it to the facts in the present case, we then turn to the evidence to ascertain whether the Government has acted arbitrarily and unnecessarily in proceeding to condemn the site involved." * * * * (Emphasis ours.)

The Court, in the Patten case, referring to the site involved in that case, further said:

"The site involved possesses special and superior advantages as regards the government departments and the general public which no other available site affords, as it is surrounded on three sides by public streets and on one side by a public park, and is a conspicuous site along the harbor channel in full view and touch with the harbor activities, enabling those concerned with government inspection of other governmental departments to gain prompt and convenient access to the federal building, such as immigration, quarantine, steamboat inspection, and customs. It is nearer the railway passenger station, street car and interurban lines, and the close railway tracks paralleling the plaza affords opportunity for the installation of a conveyor system by means of a subway and tunnel to transfer the mails to and from the railway mail cars and the post office, which is a saving in time and expense. There appear other advantages near the seat of operation which the site has in the way of location as regards both governmental departments and the general public which are more necessary and a greater public use than a small part of a plaza. This conclusion was reached by the trial court and is sustained by the weight of the evidence." (Emphasis ours.)

In referring to the site sought to be condemned in this case, the District Court (55 Fed. Supp. 562) (R. 615) said:

"Here a valuable city park and its present public uses will be destroyed if plaintiff condemns the park site. The City has given bond to remove by wrecking or otherwise, the present Common Pleas Court House, where Court is held; the building is also used for the city government. Certainly during the course of construction of the new buildings, judicial administration will be affected. There appears to be no definite arrangements for the Court of Common Pleas insofar as this record is concerned. There is no suggestion for the future of the public library and the building in which it is located—other than removal of the building 'on thirty days notice'. There is no necessity for the destruction of these public services, conveniences and improvements. Necessity is not even claimed by the plaintiff."

The Courts below properly found that the facts in this record are sufficient to distinguish this case from the cases relied on by counsel for the Petitioner.

IV.

The record supports the finding of the District Court that the Administrator of Federal Works Agency and the Postmaster-General acted arbitrarily and capriciously in selecting the proposed site.

It is conceded in this record that no joint selection of the site in question had been made prior to the filing of the original Petition in Condemnation in this case. As a matter of fact, the record discloses that no joint selection was made until after the Court of Appeals reversed and remanded the cause on the first appeal. Carmack v. United States, 135 F. 2d 196. In referring to this matter, the District Court said:

"• • • Since the decision of the Court of Appeals, holding that proof of joint selection was a jurisdictional fact, the two public officers referred to have executed a site selection of the land described in the petition.

"There is no evidence that either the Postmaster General or the Administrator of the Federal Works Agency were ever informed or even now know that the site selection that bears their signatures (U. S. Ex. 4) describes land that is a public park or that the land was devoted to any public use—except for a 'library building'. As to the library building, they had no knowledge as to its being subject to removal on thirty days' notice." (United States v. Certain Land, 55 Fed. Supp. 555, l. c. 557.) (R. 603.)

In United States v. 43,355 Square Feet of Land, 51 F. Supp. 905, in deciding that the property had been capriciously and arbitrarily selected, the court said (loc. cit. page 909):

> "In making these observations and stating these findings and conclusions the Court does not say or imply that any particular officer of the Government or any particular military man has gone out with a deliberate attempt to act facetiously with respect to the public generally. So far as I know each inspector and appraiser of this property may have done every act that he did in response to the order of some superior located in some other place.
> "The Court's conclusions relate to the situation as a matter of law, not as a matter of any express design going to the question of proper, lawful or other kind of motives of the particular official or military man who may have made an appraisal or an inspection or a report." (Emphasis added.)

At page 909 of the opinion in that case (51 F. Supp. 905) referring to the opinion of the Court in the Carmack Case, supra, (135 F. 2d, 196), the Court said:

> "(9) This Court believes that the opinion of the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals in that case applies to the situation in the case before the Court here, where the Government's position in effect is that, as to administrative acts of Government War Department officials under the Second War Powers Act, 50 U. S. C. A. Appendix Section 631 et seq., there is no judicial review except a review which must result in judicial approval, never disapproval, of administrative action. That I believe is not the law. If it were, a citizen would have no relief in any case against arbitrary or oppressive action of administrative officials." (Emphasis added.)

In Baisden v. Floyd County Board of Education, 270 Ky. 839, 110 S. W. (2d) 671, loc. cit. 673, the court, in referring to the duty to inquire as to whether the act of a Board was arbitrary, said:

> "While this court cannot question the motives of the Board in removing one who is delinquent in his statutory duties (Board of Education v. Stevens, supra), we can and will upon review inquire as to whether the act of the Board was arbitrary; we may determine what was right and equitable under the circumstances; whether the act was directed by reason and in good conscience. Brumfield v. Consolidated Coach Corp., 240 Ky. 1, 40 S. W. (2d) 356. In its legal significance an act is arbitrary when it is done in an arbitrary or capricious way; without adequate determining principle; not founded in the nature of things. King v. Falls County (Tex. Civ. App.) 42 S. W. (2d) 481. When we come to consider the action of the Board in removing appellant, we are forced to the conclusion that the removal was not based on sound reason or in the exercise of good judgment; it was neither right nor equitable, since we conclude that the reasons set forth in the affidavit and petition measure up to our idea of 'satisfactory' reasons for appellant's non-attendance at the three meetings." (Emphasis added.)

Respondent believes that this Court will give consideration to State Court decisions for in New York Rapid Transit Corp. v. City of New York, 303 U. S., 573, loc. cit. 593, in referring to the matter of construing a contract, the court said:

> "But, of course, in so doing we 'lean toward agreement with the courts of the State, and accept their judgments as to such matters unless manifestly wrong.'"

The District Court (R. 610) in discussing the position now taken by Petitioner in this case, (55 Fed. Supp. loc. cit. 560) said:

> "3. We conclude from this record that the plaintiff (Petitioner herein) concedes in this case that the selection of the site described in the petition, 'was on the basis of exchange of the present Federal Building and site thereof' for the city park site described in the petition, as the result of the agreement between the city officials and the plaintiff. In doing this did the Joint Committee base their act on a false premise, namely: a mistake of law; the law governing the right of the city to sell or exchange the whole or any part of the park site?"

The Court there quotes item VI. of the Agreed Statement of Facts, the agreement to exchange property. (R. 162.) (Appendix p. 6a.)

Again, at Page 561 of the Opinion, (55 Fed. Supp. 555, 568) the District Court (R. 613.) said:

"We believe the action of the Joint Committee, in the proceeding under a mistake of law, is decisive of this case adverse to the plaintiff, but we do not base our holding on that point alone.

"The cause must be considered under those rules of law applying to condemnation proceedings under a general act, which does not specify any certain property shall be condemned* * *."

The District Court (R. 615) also said: "Here a valuable city park and its present public uses will be destroyed if plaintiff condemns the park site. The city has given bond to remove by wrecking or otherwise, the present common pleas court house, where Court is held; the building is also used for the city government. Certainly during the course of construction of the new building, judicial administration will be affected. There appears to be no definite arrangements for the Court of Common Pleas in so far as this record is concerned. There is no suggestion for the future of the public library and the building in which it is located—other than removal of the building 'on thirty days notice'. There is no necessity for the destruction of these public services, conveniences and improvements. Necessity is not even claimed by the plaintiff. * * *

"Nowhere in the record do we find any claim by plaintiff that the site proposed is the only available property, reasonably fitted for the public project, or that failure to secure it would result in failure of the project.

"Upon the record this Court cannot find that the site described in the complaint is the only available property, reasonably fitted for the public project, when the plaintiff's own representative, chosen because of his knowledge and ability to select sites, has placed another site superior in desirability to the site sought. With this admission of plaintiff's representative this Court cannot find that the failure to secure the site described in the petition would result in failure of the public project. These facts support defendant's position in this case. Nor was there the slightest effort made in this case by the plaintiff to show a necessity for taking the particular property here involved, already devoted to a public purpose. On the contrary the evidence is undisputed and comes from an unimpeachable source, the government's witnesses, that there is no necessity for taking the particular property described in the petition. That another location is preferable is an unchallenged fact in this case. Consequently there can be no necessity by implication. Plaintiff proceeding under a general act, its case must fail for that reason also.

"The plaintiff is content, or rather forced to be, to rest its case solely upon the right of the city to sell or trade the park property, coupled with the rule that selection of the site by authorized officers carries an assumption that the decision was based on facts justifying the action taken, until the contrary be shown. The contrary has been shown in this case."

With respect to the contention of Petitioner that the Courts below passed upon the question of the good faith of the parties, we here call attention to the language of the District Court bearing on this question at Page 563 in this case, United States v. Certain Lands, etc., 55 Fed. Supp., 555, 563 R. 617.):

"* * * The city officials of Cape Girardeau, no doubt acting in perfect good faith, represented to plaintiff or the Joint Committee on site selection, that the city had a legal right to sell or exchange the park site. Also acting in perfect good faith the officials of plaintiff and the Joint Committee 'relied' upon the representations of the Cape Girardeau city officials as to their legal right to sell or exchange the park site, and the Joint Committee so relying, 'based' their decision as to site selection, upon such erroneous representation. The City of Cape Girardeau being without a legal right to sell or exchange the park property, as held by the Supreme Court of Missouri and in the opinion in this case by the Federal Court of Appeals, leaves the action of the Joint Committee in selecting the park site in the same status, as a matter of law, as if no exchange negotiations had taken place, and the plaintiff's officials had never been induced to consider the site upon the basis of the proposed exchange."

The District Court then cited the case of Thompson v. Consolidated Gas Utilities Corp., 300 U.S. 55, 57 S.Ct. 364, 81 L.Ed. 510, where this Court, at Page 69 of said opinion, held:

"It is settled that to all administrative regulations purporting to be made under authority legally delegated there attaches a presumption of the existence of facts justifying the specific exercise. * * * The plaintiffs have assumed the heavy burden of overcoming the presumption and of establishing that the order is an arbitrary taking of their property."

The Circuit Court of Appeals, after reciting the facts in this record, said:

"As stated above, this proposed agreement (agreement for an exchange of properties) was the moving cause of the selection of the Park as the site for the Federal Building. When it developed that the City of Cape Girardeau was not only without power but was prohibited by Missouri law from carrying out the proposed contract and thus violating the trust under which it held the property, the present proceedings for condemnation of the site were instituted as a means for accomplishing indirectly an exchange of properties which could not be directly made." (United States v. Carmack, 151 Fed. 2d. 881, 883.) (R. 662)

V.

The City of Cape Girardeau Has No Authority To Contract to Convey Land Involved.

To show that the invalidity of the purported agreement is vital and very important in this case, we call the Court's attention to a case wherein the City of Kennett, Missouri, executed a contract with the United States which it had no authority to make under the laws of the State of Missouri, Ark.-Mo. Power Co. v. City of Kennett, Mo., 78 F.2d 911. In discussing the right of the defendant in that case to have a contract declared void, the court made the following statement (l.c. 922):

> "Revised Statutes of Missouri 1929, Sec. 2962 (now Revised Statutes of Missouri 1939, Sec. 3349), provides that no * * * city * * * or other municipal corporation shall make any contract unless the same shall be within the scope of its powers or be expressly authorized by law * * *. The City derives none of its powers from the United States. It is a creature of the State of Missouri and has only such powers as the state has given it. The relation of the United States to the City is no different than would be the relation to it of any individual, corporation, foreign state or foreign sovereignty which had made a similar arrangement for financing the City with respect to the construction of public works. If the City could lawfully enter into this agreement with the United States, we think it could lawfully have entered into a similar agreement with any entity having power to contract." (Emphasis added.)

Under the law as declared by the Supreme Court of Missouri, the alleged agreement between the officers of the United States and the officials of the City of Cape Girardeau offered in evidence in this case is worthless.

> Board of Regents for Normal School District No. 3 v. Painter, 102 Mo. 464; 14 S. W. 938.

American Jurisprudence, Volume 18, paragraph 126, states the rule applicable to the facts in this case, as follows:

> "A municipal corporation cannot without express authority from the Legislature sell property which it holds for the use and benefit of the public at large."

The record in this case fully supports the finding of the District Court that the Government officials, in ignoring the decision of the Supreme Court of Missouri in the Painter case, supra, and the rule just stated acted arbitrarily without reasonable regard for the interests of the public at large and especially of the City and County of Cape Girardeau, and that the determination to select the Court House Park as a site for the new Post Office was made without considering the facts and without reference to the information which the investigation, report and recommendations made by the Government's only Site Agent so fully and clearly disclosed.

We believe it has been sufficiently shown by what has already been said herein that the law of the State of Missouri as stated in the Painter case, supra, is the law by which this case was rightly decided by the courts below, and that the action of the Government officers in wholly ignoring the decision in that case is arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable.

We call attention to a few of the decisions of the Courts of the United States which hold that the law of the State should be recognized and followed.

In Guy v. Utecht, Warden, 144 F. 2d 913, l. c. 915, the Court said:

> "The highest court of a state is the final arbiter of what the state law is, and when that court has spoken, its decision must be accepted by the federal courts as defining the law of the state. West v. American Telephone & Telegraph Co., 311 U. S. 223, 236, 61 S. Ct. 179, 85 L. Ed. 139, 132 A. L. R. 956; Wichita Royalty Co. v. City National Bank of Wichita Falls, 306 U. S. 103, 107, 59 S. Ct. 420, 83 L. Ed. 515; Herzog v. Colpoys, App. D. C. 143 F. 2d 137, 138."

In Krauss v. Greenbarg, 137 F. 2d 569, the Court of Appeals, Third Circuit, at page 571 said:

> "However, as this Court has said many times since Erie Railroad Co. vs. Tompkins, 1938, 304 U. S. 64, 58 S. Ct. 817, 82 L. Ed. 1188, 114 A. L. R. 1487, our duty is to apply state law as we find it in the state decisions irrespective of what we may regard as its merits."

In Charles Payton West and Maurice John West v. American Telephone and Telegraph Co., 311 U. S. 223, l. c. 236, 237, the Court said:

> "* * * the state 'laws' which, by Sec. 34 of the Judiciary Act of 1789, 1 Stat. at L. 92, chap. 20, 28 U.S. C.A., Sec. 725, are made 'the rules of decision in trials at common law' define the nature and extent of petitioners' right. See Russell v. Todd, 309 U. S. 280, 289, 84 L.Ed. 754, 761, 60 S.Ct. 527. And the rules of decision established by judicial decisions of state courts are 'laws' as well as those prescribed by statute. Erie R. Co. v. Tompkins, supra (304 U. S. 78, 82 L.Ed. 1194, 58 S.Ct. 817, 114 A.L.R. 1487). True, as was intimated in the Erie R. Co. Case (304 U. S. 78), the highest court of the state is the final arbiter of what is state law. When it has spoken, its pronouncement is to be accepted by federal courts as defining state law unless it has later given clear and persuasive indication that its pronouncement will be modified, limited or restricted. See Wichita Royalty Co. v. City Nat. Bank, 306 U.S. 103, 107, 83 L.Ed. 515, 517, 59 S.Ct. 420. But the obvious purpose of Sec. 34 of the Judiciary Act is to avoid the maintenance within a state of two divergent or conflicting systems of law, one to be applied in the state courts, the other to be availed of in the federal courts, only in case of diversity of citizenship. That object would be thwarted if the federal courts were free to choose their own rules of decision whenever the highest court of the state has not spoken."

In Palmer v. Hoffman, 318 U.S. 109, l.c. 118, the Court said:

> "Where the lower federal courts are applying local law, we will not set aside their ruling except on a plain showing of error."

Board of Regents for Normal School District No. 3 v. Painter, 102 Mo. 464; 14 S. W. 938, settles the question of Missouri law prohibiting the City Officials from entering into an agreement with the agents of the Government for an exchange of property. That opinion is printed in the Appendix, Pages 10a-15a.

VI.

The rule is also well settled that if the decision of the lower courts was correct the petition for writ of certiorari should be denied, even though the court below may have based its ruling upon a wrong ground or had not based its ruling on all the facts in the record which would have justified additional grounds for the decision.

In North American Acc. Ins. Co. v. Tebbs, 10 Cir. 107 F.2d 853, l.c. 856, the Court of Appeals held:

> "The trial court reached a correct result. The fact that he gave erroneous reasons therefor is immaterial. In the review of judicial proceedings if a decision below is correct, it must be affirmed, although the lower court relied upon a wrong ground or gave a wrong reason."

In Helvering v. Gowran, 302 U. S. 238, l.c. 245, the Court said:

> "In the review of judicial proceedings the rule is settled that if the decision below is correct, it must be affirmed, although the lower court relied upon a wrong ground or gave a wrong reason."

In Reconstruction Finance Corporation v. Goldberg, 143 F.2d 752, l.c. 756, the Court said:

> "Furthermore, even though the court had relied upon a wrong ground for its judgment, it must be affirmed if correct. Helvering v. Gowran, 302 U.S. 238, 245, 58 S.Ct. 154, 82 L.Ed. 224; LeTulle v. Schofield, 308 U.S. 415, 421, 60 S.Ct. 313, 84 L.Ed. 355."

In Dr. William Howard Hay Foundation v. Safety Harbor Sanatorium, 145 F.2d 661, l.c. 663, the Court said:

> "The findings positively and definitely decide against plaintiff all fact issues tendered on the trial, and they fully support the conclusions of law. It is appellant's burden, therefore, to show us that these are clearly erroneous."

In Westchester County Park Commission v. United States, 143 F.2d 688, l.c. 694, 695, the Court said:

> "These rulings, to be sure, occurred in cases not involving condemnation; but that would seem to be a distinction without significance. Even, however, should we disregard those rulings, we would nevertheless conclude that there was no prejudice here. For, as under Rule 81 (a) (7), 28 U.S.C.A. following section 723c, the new rules of procedure are applicable to appeals in condemnation cases, we must, under Rule 43 (a), apply the more generous rule of evidence; therefore, the federal 'harmless error' statute (28 U.S.C.A. Sec. 391) governs; under that statute, the admission of the testimony was surely harmless. Cf. United States v. Miller, 317 U.S. 369, 375, 63 S.Ct. 276, 87 L.Ed. 336, 147 A.L.R. 55.
> "(17) 5. Nothing is left to this appeal but, in effect, a request to us to conduct a trial de novo. This we cannot do. The trial court's determination of the facts must stand unless it is unsupported by substantial evidence. We see no warrant for reversal on that score."

VII.

Government's authority to dispose of present Post Office Building and Site is restricted by Acts of Congress.

It is apparent from the facts in the record now under consideration that the Government is not authorized by Section 341 or Section 345b of Title 40 U.S.C., or any other statute to exchange the present Post Office Building and site at Cape Girardeau for the land described in the Condemnation Petition already devoted to public use.

There is no claim by Petitioner that the government-owned building and site has been supplanted by a new structure, or that the Secretary of the Treasury has determined there is no further federal need for the present government-owned building and site.

Section 345b, Title 40, provides the only method for disposing of existing federal buildings and it applies only in cases where existing buildings have been supplanted by new structures.

The alleged agreement for such an exchange of property is unauthorized, illegal and void and cannot be effectuated under the guise of a condemnation suit.

Furthermore, it is evident that in the selection of the site in this case, the administrative agents gave no consideration "to the interest and convenience of the public," as required by Section 254, Title 40, U. S. Code.

VIII.

Petitioner misconceives the effect of the decision of the courts below.

Petitioner (Petition, P. 22, last paragraph) states that "the decision below would seem to require specific selection, by Act of Congress, of each site already put to a public use. Unless Congress is to be left in doubt as to what language, if any, is necessary or will serve to avoid this obviously impractical construction, review by this Court would seem to be essential." The Petitioner's criticism of the decisions of the courts below is wholly unwarranted, under the undisputed facts in this record. The facts are that the courts below followed the unbroken line of authorities authorizing the courts to review the action of administrative officials in the circumstances here presented.

In order to show that Petitioner has misinterpreted the decision of the courts below, we here quote from the opinion of the District Court (55 F. Supp. 555, 563) (R. 617) showing that the position of Petitioner is unfounded. The Court said:

> "Certain conclusions suggest themselves which should be stated. This is not a case, in fact, where the representatives of the plaintiff have gone to the city of Cape Girardeau and designated the most imposing tract of ground in the city from a landscape viewpoint and which is now used as a public park, for the site of the new Federal building. And this notwithstanding the site is not in the trend of business nor accessible except from one street. That while the plaintiff will not take all the park, it will take a sufficient part of the park to destroy its usefulness as a park. That the plaintiff has proceeded to issue an order for the destruction of the public buildings on the site; buildings in which necessary public business is now transacted, including the Court of Common Pleas, Departments of City Government and the storage of valuable records, and granted to another building in which a public library is housed 'thirty days' to vacate. That this action was taken by the Joint Committee, with information in their possession with respect to availability of other sites which shows unquestionably that the action of the plaintiff is unnecessary and the site selected is not now, nor was it when selected, the most desirable and available. If this were the cold record, we believe few would question the conclusion that such action by the Joint Committee was arbitrary and unnecessary.

"Nevertheless the conclusions, as outlined above, are present as a matter of law on the record in this case. The evidence shows that plaintiff was caused to take action which leads to the same results as outlined above, by virtue of the solicitation and entreaty of the city officials of Cape Girardeau, which solicitation crystalized in an agreement between the city officials of the city of Cape Girardeau and the Government officials to trade the park site (described in the petition) for the present Federal building. The city officials of Cape Girardeau, no doubt acting in perfect good faith represented to plaintiff or the Joint Committee on site selection, that the city had a legal right to sell or exchange the park site. Also acting in perfect good faith the officials of plaintiff and the Joint Committee 'relied' upon the representations of the Cape Girardeau city officials as to their legal right to sell or exchange the park site, and the Joint Committee so relying, 'based' their decision as to site selection, upon such erroneous representation. The City of Cape Girardeau being without a legal right to sell or exchange the park property, as held by the Supreme Court of Missouri and in the opinion in this case by the Federal Court of Appeals, leaves the action of the Joint Committee in selecting the park site in the same status, as a matter of law, as if no exchange negotiations had taken place, and the plaintiff's officials had never been induced to consider the site upon the basis of the proposed exchange.

"In the case of Thompson v. Consolidated Gas Utilities Corp., 300 U. S. 55, 57 S. Ct. 364, 81 L. Ed. 510, the Supreme Court had before it the question of legality of a gas proration order issued by the Railway Commission of Texas, ostensibly for the purpose, among others, of preventing the waste of gas. We think what the Court said with respect to the presumption of the existence of facts justifying the specific exercise of the power there under consideration, applies to the selection of a site for a post office made by and under authority of those agents of the Government to whom such duty has been delegated. Referring to the order in the Thompson case, the Court said, 300 U. S. loc. cit. 69, 57 S. Ct. loc. cit. 371, 81 L. Ed. 510: 'It is settled that to all administrative regulations purporting to be made under authority legally delegated there attaches a presumption of the existence of facts justifying the specific exercise. * * * The plaintiffs have assumed the heavy burden of overcoming the presumption and of establishing that the order is an arbitrary taking of their property.'

"A consideration of all the facts justifies the conclusion that defendant (Respondent herein) has sustained the burden of proof placed upon her; that the selection of the site described in the petition, under all the facts referred to, amounts in law to an arbitrary and unnecessary act. Plaintiff's second amended petition will be dismissed."

The above quoted language clearly shows that the contention of Petitioner (Petition p. 17) that arbitrary or capricious means "bad faith" has no application to the decisions of the courts below, under the undisputed facts in this record. The courts below expressly held that the question of bad faith did not enter into the consideration of the facts bearing upon the question of arbitrary or capricious action of the administrative agents.

Petitioner asks this court to grant a writ of certiorari on the grounds that the decision in this case is in conflict with the decision in the C. M. Patten and Company case, whereas an examination of the Patten case discloses that this case is not in conflict with the decision in the Patten case under the conceded facts in this record, but, on the contrary, is in exact accord and harmony with the Patten case.

C. M. Patten and Company v. United States, 9 Cir., 61 F. 2d 970 (erroneously stated as page 920 in the opinion of the Court of Appeals (R. 663)), quotes from United States v. City of Tiffin, 190 F. 279, 280, including the following:

> "This does not mean, however, that no power may intervene to prevent arbitrary action, for such power certainly abides in the courts."

The Court (61 F. 2d, l. c. 972) then says:

> "However, this right of the federal government to condemn is subject to the power of courts to intervene and prevent arbitrary and unnecessary action, which must be determined by the facts in each particular case."

The Court (page 972) also says:

> "Recognizing therefore the principle thus stated and applying it to the facts in the present case, we then turn to the evidence to ascertain whether the government has acted arbitrarily and unnecessarily in proceeding to condemn the site involved."

The Court (p. 972) then stated the advantages in the selection of the site and said:

"This conclusion was reached by the trial court and is sustained by the weight of the evidence."

The decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals was correct and is not subject to review when, in approving the findings of the District Court, based upon the evidence in this record, it said:

"We cannot say that any of these findings of fact by the District Court are clearly erroneous. On the contrary, each of them was, in our opinion, required by the evidence." (R. 661, 662.)

CONCLUSION.

The Respondent, by reason of the facts in the record and the applicable principles of law, believes that the Petition for Writ of Certiorari should be denied, and respectfully asks that the Court will so order.

APPENDIX.

(The formal style of case omitted here.)

Washington, D. C.,
Tuesday, November 9, 1943.

Stipulation Between the Plaintiff, United States of America, and Defendant, Iska W. Carmack, Regarding an Agreed Statement of Facts to be Read in Evidence on the Part of the Defendant, Iska W. Carmack, in the Above-Entitled Cause.

Without limiting either the right of the defendant, Iska W. Carmack, to take depositions in the above entitled cause, or the scope of the inquiry in the above entitled cause, it is agreed between the plaintiff, United States of America, and Iska W. Carmack, one of the defendants in the above-entitled cause, as follows:

Item I. Agreed Statements of Facts.

That the United States of America, plaintiff, and Iska W. Carmack, one of the defendants in the above-entitled case, admit the statements of facts hereinafter set out, and agree that said statements of facts shall be read in evidence on behalf of the said defendant, Iska W. Carmack, on the trial of a certain cause now pending in the United States District Court, Eastern District of Missouri, Southeastern Division, Civil Action, File No. 482 (Condemnation Suit) wherein the said United States of America is plaintiff and the said Iska W. Carmack, is one of the defendants;

That said statements of facts hereinafter set out shall be received in evidence on the trial of said cause, as aforesaid, as agreed statements of facts;

That this stipulation, signed by the parties hereto, shall be filed with the shorthand reporter, spread upon the record, and annexed to the certificate of the said shorthand reporter to be sworn to before a notary public in accordance with certain stipulations between the parties hereto, signed by said parties and filed with the said shorthand reporter, on the ninth day of November, A. D., 1943, and spread upon the record by agreement between said parties hereto, on said ninth day of November, A. D., 1943.

Item II. Description of the Property.

That it is agreed by and between the parties hereto that the property sought to be condemned in the above entitled cause by the United States of America, plaintiff herein, as the site for the construction and maintenance of a Post Office, Custom House, and Federal Court building at Cape Girardeau, Missouri, is located in the town (now City) of Cape Girardeau, Missouri, in the Eastern Judicial District of Missouri, Southeastern Division.

It is further agreed that the property sought to be condemned in Plaintiff's (Second) Amended Petition in Condemnation, filed in the above-entitled cause, is now and has been for many years, devoted to public purposes (the Common Pleas Court House, City Offices, Public Library, and Public Park);

That Post Office Inspector M. J. Deutsch was designated as the Government's only Site Agent to visit said City of Cape Girardeau, County of Cape Girardeau, and State of Missouri, for the purpose of investigating and recommending to the Joint Committee considering the selection of the Post Office, Custom House, and Federal Court Building Site at Cape Girardeau, Missouri, an available, suitable, and fitted site for the construction and maintenance of a Post Office, Custom House, and Federal Court Building at Cape Girardeau, Missouri.

That said Post Office Inspector, M. J. Deutsch, in fact visited the said City of Cape Girardeau, Missouri, from July 23 to 26, 1940, and from July 29 to 31, 1940, during which time the said Post Office Inspector, M. J. Deutsch, investigated each of the twenty-two (22) parcels submitted in response to the advertisement of the United States of America to submit proposals of sites for inspection.

That the said Post Office Inspector, M. J. Deutsch, did, after considering facts pertinent to the site selection for the construction and maintenance of a Post Office, Custom House, and Federal Court Building at Cape Girardeau, Missouri, make a report to said Joint Committee considering the selection of said site for the construction and maintenance of a Post Office, Custom House, and Federal Court Building at Cape Girardeau, Missouri, wherein said Post Office Inspector, M. J. Deutsch, recommended as his first choice a site other than the public property sought to be condemned in Plaintiff's (Second) Amended Petition in Condemnation filed in the above-entitled cause.

That copies of said Site Agent's report, made by said Post Office Inspector M. J. Deutsch, were sent with the letter sent to The Honorable, The Attorney-General of the United States requesting the filing of the Plaintiff's (Second) Amended Petition in Condemnation in the above-entitled cause;

That a copy of said report and recommendation of said Post Office Inspector M. J. Deutsch was sent to Harry C. Blanton, United States Attorney of Eastern Judicial District of Missouri, the attorney of record for the United States of America, the plaintiff in the above-entitled cause now pending in the United States District Court, Eastern District of Missouri, Southeastern Division, Civil Action. File No. 482, and said copy of said report of said Site Agent, Post Office Inspector M. J. Deutsch, is now in the custody of said Harry C. Blanton, United States Attorney.

It is further agreed that the property sought to be condemned by the plaintiff, the United States of America, in the above-entitled cause is in the nature of a public park upon which is located a Court House used by the Court of Common Pleas of Cape Girardeau County, a Public Library Building, a bandstand, a memorial monument surrounded by a fountain, and a memorial monument to W. F. D. Bajer, the latter being in front of the library building.

The park upon which these structures are located is used for gatherings of the Boy Scouts, and gatherings of various other groups. It is also used as place for recreation, and is furnished with settees. The library is a public one, used by the public generally. The bandstand is not only used by the band in giving concerts, but is used for public speakings. The second story of the court house is occupied by the Common Pleas Court, a Judge's Chambers, and a law library for the court, the entire second floor being appropriated to the Common Pleas Court service. The first floor is occupied by various city officials, including the city clerk, the clerk of the Court of Common Pleas, the city engineer, the mayor, the city council, and the city attorney. There is a basement in this building used largely for a storage space, in which to keep the files and records of the Court of Common Pleas. The Government seeks to condemn all the property with the improvements thereon except the library building.

[Stipulation contains no Item III.]

Item IV. Public Library and Public Library Building.

It is agreed by and between the parties hereto that there is now and has been for many years past continuously maintained a public library building in which the said City of Cape Girardeau, Missouri, now and for many years past has continuously maintained a public library for the general public, both as a public library and also additionally as a meeting place for civic organizations such as garden clubs, rose societies, historic societies, and other civic and public gatherings.

All of the real estate on which the above-mentioned public library building is located, together with all of the real estate adjacent to said public library building, is included in the description of the property sought to be condemned in the (Second) Amended Petition, in Condemnation, filed by the United States of America, plaintiff, in the above-entitled cause in the United States District Court, Eastern District of Missouri, Southeastern Division, Civil Action, File No. 482, wherein the said Iska W. Carmack is one of the defendants;

That the City of Cape Girardeau, Missouri, will be required to vacate said public library building situated on the said real estate sought to be acquired by the United States of America by condemnation in the above-entitled action upon thirty days' notice by the Government, and, upon notice, to remove said Library and Library Building from Government property within a reasonable time.

The land sought to be condemned was originally conveyed with other land in 1807 by its then owner, Louis Lorimier, to the Board of Commissioners and Assessors for the use of the District of Cape Girardeau. The deed recites that it was executed pursuant to a proposal of the grantor, made on the thirteenth day of January, 1806, to have the Seat of Justice of that District permanently fixed upon his land at that place. The deed contains provisions in the nature of conditions or limitations that the land so given should 'be and remain forever common and public, and never to be appropriated to private use, agreeably to the explicit intention of the donor.'

Item V. Facts Regarding the Deeds of 1814 and 1820.

It is agreed by and between the parties hereto that in 1814, the Seat of Justice in the meantime (between 1804 and 1814) been removed from Cape Girardeau to Jackson, the Judges of the Court of Common Pleas in form conveyed this tract to the heirs of Louis Lorimier, and on September 11, 1820, all of the heirs of Louis Lorimier, deceased, conveyed the premises by quit claim deed to the inhabitants of the Town of Cape Girardeau collectively 'for their use, benefit and behoof forever.'

This deed conveyed certain other property not here involved, and concluded with the following paragraph:

> "Provided always that the several tracts or parcels of land thus granted to the Town of Cape Girardeau and the citizens thereof shall remain forever affected and appropriated to the public uses to which they are respectively intended, and that they, nor any part of them, shall never become private property."

That the said defendant, Iska W. Carmack, is one of the direct heirs of Louis Lorimier, deceased, and of Maria Louise Lorimier, Thomas S. Rodney, and Thomas Jefferson Rodney, mentioned in the caption and in paragraph Eleventh, of Plaintiff's said (Second) Amended Petition in Condemnation.

That said defendant, Iska W. Carmack, is an inhabitant, citizen, taxpayer, and owner of lots in and near the said town (now city) of Cape Girardeau, Missouri.

It is further agreed by and between the parties hereto that the acquisition by the Government by condemnation in the Plaintiff's (Second) Amended Petition in Condemnation filed in the above-entitled cause will include all property under and immediately adjacent to the Public Library Building.

Item VI. Agreement to Exchange Property.

That the City Officials of the City of Cape Girardeau, Missouri, represented to the Joint Committee considering the selection of site for Post Office, Custom House, and Federal Court Building at Cape Girardeau, Missouri, that said City Officials desired to negotiate with the United States Government for the exchange of the Court House Park, City Offices, Common Pleas Court House, and Public Library Building, in exchange for the Old United States Post Office Building located in said City of Cape Girardeau, Missouri;

That said City Officials claimed and represented that they based their authority to sell or dispose property upon Section 7210 and 7211 of the Revised Statutes of Missouri 1929;

That the alleged agreement between the City Officials of the City of Cape Girardeau, Missouri, and the United States of America for the exchange of the old Post Office Building and site for the property ought to be condemned is based upon said representations as to the right and authority of the City Officials to sell or dispose property under said Section 7210 and 7211 of the Revised Statutes of Missouri 1929.

Item VII. Harlan Bartholomew.

Several years ago Harlan Bartholomew of St. Louis, Missouri, a city planning expert, made a plan for the City of Cape Girardeau, Missouri.

Item VIII. Architect.

It is agreed by and between the parties hereto that Associate Architect H. A. Tucker had no authority and was given no instructions to examine any sites offered at the City of Cape Girardeau, Missouri, other than the site sought to be condemned, for the Post Office, Custom House, and Federal Court Building, but, acting under instructions dated September 25, 1940, of the said Joint Committee, visited Cape Girardeau between October 1 and October 7, 1940, for the purpose of obtaining such data as necessary to develop studies for utilizing the property sought to be condemned in the Plaintiff's (Second) Amended Petition in Condemnation; and further,

That the said H. A. Tucker had no authority, and was given no instructions to make any investigation of said other sites, and had no authority to make any recommendations to the said Joint Committee regarding the selection of a site for the New Post Office Building, Custom House, and Federal Court Building, at Cape Girardeau, Missouri, and, in fact made none.

Item IX. Liaison Officer.

It is agreed by and between the parties hereto that H. S. Roome, Liaison Officer of the Federal Works Agency, had no authority, and was given no instructions to inspect any sites offered at the City of Cape Girardeau, Missouri, for the Post Office, Custom House, and Federal Court Building, and made none, but, acting under instructions of the Federal Works Administrator, dated November 20, 1940, the said Liaison Officer H. S. Roome conferred with City Officials at Cape Girardeau, Missouri, from November 24 to November 29, 1940, inclusive, for the purpose of negotiating a mutually satisfactory proposal to be submitted to the Government by the City Officials of Cape Girardeau, Missouri, for the exchange of the property described in Plaintiff's (Second) Amended Petition in Condemnation filed in the above-entitled cause, for the old Post Office Building and site.

The said Liaison Officer H. S. Roome agreed with the City Officials of Cape Girardeau, Missouri, on the form of proposal to be submitted to the Government for the exchange of property, but made no recommendation regarding the merits of the property sought to be condemned, or any other property as a site for a Post Office, Custom House, and Federal Court Building at Cape Girardeau, Missouri.

Item X. Petitions of Cape Girardeau, Missouri, Citizens and Taxpayers Filed With the Joint Committee.

That it is agreed by and between the parties hereto that John Sample of Cape Girardeau, Missouri, did, on or about November 19, 1940, cause to be filed a petition with the Joint Committee considering the selection of a site for the Post Office, Custom House, and Federal Court Building at Cape Girardeau, Missouri, signed by six hundred and sixty-seven (667) citizens and property owners of said City of Cape Girardeau, Missouri, protesting any action which would result in part of the said park (property sought to be condemned) being used for Federal building purposes.

Item XI. Project Deferred for the Duration.

That it is agreed by and between the parties hereto that the project of constructing a Post Office, Custom House, and Federal Court Building at Cape Girardeau, Missouri, has been deferred for the duration of the War, and the City Officials of the said City of Cape Girardeau, Missouri, were notified of said deferment of said project for the duration on February 19, 1942, by the Administrator of Public Works.

Item XII. Recommendation of the Joint Committee.

That said Joint Committee considering the selection of site for Post Office, Custom House, and Federal Court Building at Cape Girardeau, Missouri, did, on April 7, 1941, recommend the acceptance of the City's proposal which had been worked out as to form by the said H. S. Roome, Liaison Officer.

The recommended acceptance of the site sought to be condemned by the Joint Committee was on the basis of an exchange of the present Federal Building and site thereof, and acceptance was made with the understanding that the United States Government would be permitted to occupy the present Federal Building and site at Cape Girardeau, Missouri, until after the proposed building had been completed and made ready for occupancy.

The acceptance was recommended by the Joint Committee with the agreement on the part of the City Officials of the City of Cape Girardeau, Missouri, that the City would vacate the premises known as the Library Building, upon thirty days' notice from the United States Government, and thereafter remove the building within a reasonable time.

Item XIII. Agreement Does Not Limit Right of Iska W. Carmack to Offer Additional Further Evidence.

It is further agreed by and between the parties hereto that the foregoing statements of facts are to be offered in evidence on the part of the Defendant, Iska W. Carmack, on the trial of the above-entitled cause without prejudice to the right of said Iska W. Carmack to offer further and additional and other testimony regarding any or all of the facts herein set out.

The Parties Hereto Stipulate And Agree as set out in the above and foregoing statements of facts, and in witness thereof hereunto set their hands and affix their seals this 9th day of November, A. D., 1943, Washington City, District of Columbia, U. S. A.

The foregoing statements approved by:

HARRY J. McNERNEY,
Attorney, Federal Works Agency.

The law to be applied to the facts in this case, is the law of the State of Missouri as declared by the Supreme Court of Missouri with respect to the power of the City to exchange or convey the property here involved. The opinion of the Supreme Court of the State of Missouri construing the deed from the Lorimer heirs of September 11, 1820, relied upon by the United States in this case, is, therefore, for convenience and ease of reference, here printed in full, as follows:

The Board of Regents for Normal School District No. 3 v. Painter, Appellant, 102 Mo. 464; 14 S. W. 938.

The plaintiff as a body corporate brought this action of ejectment to recover out lot H in the city of Cape Girardeau. The lot in question is the eighth and last parcel of land described in the following deed, dated the eleventh of September, 1820: "Be it remembered that the undersigned heirs and legal representatives of Louis Lorimier, deceased, namely, Louis Lorimier, Daniel F. Steinbeck, Victor Lorimier and Thomas S. Rodney as guardian of Thomas Jefferson Rodney and Polly Rodney, for and in consideration of the sum of one dollar, the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged and for divers other good considerations and more particularly for the convenience and encouragement of the inhabitants of the town of Cape Girardeau and owners of lots in or near the same, have given, granted, sold, aliened, quitclaimed and conveyed, and they do hereby give, grant, sell, alien, quitclaim, convey and confirm unto the inhabitants of the town aforesaid collectively, for their use, benefit and behoof forever, the several lots or parcels of land hereinafter described, viz.: First. The place known and designated in the plan of said town as the Public Square, bounded * * * as originally laid off and containing four acres. Second. Lot number 22, in range C, bounded * * * including a spring. Third. Lot number 22, in range A, bounded * * *. Fourth. All the vacant space between the river Mississippi and the front of ranges A, B, G and H, designated on the map by the name of Front Street or Aquamsi; and generally all the ground appropriated to streets and alleys throughout the whole town, as represented in the plan thereof. Fifth. The space on the river above the town, in front of out lot number 1, containing two acres and half more or less. Sixth. A hundred feet square in out lot number 2 and adjoining North street, so as to afford a convenient access to the spring used in that part and to include said spring. Seventh. Six acres of land (as laid off in the map of out lots) situated part in out lot number 2 and part in out lot number 32 and now used as a graveyard; with the condition that the western half thereof shall be and remain appropriated to the Roman Catholic Church. Eighth. An out lot marked h containing about three acres and a quarter, bounded eastwardly by Pacific street and westwardly by John Scripp's purchase of six acres, on the north by out lot g and on the south by out lot i, which lot, including a large spring, is destined for the establishment of a public school. Together with all and singular the right, title, * * *; provided always that the several tracts or parcels of land granted to the town of Cape Girardeau and the citizens thereof shall remain forever affected and appropriated to the public use to which they are respectfully intended, and that they, or any part of them, shall never become private property. In testimony whereof, etc."

The plaintiff put in evidence the foregoing deed, and an ordinance of the city of Cape Girardeau, approved the twenty-fourth of September, 1873, which provided: "That the Mayor of the city of Cape Girardeau be and he is hereby authorized to offer to donate to the regents of the Southeast Missouri Normal School said described lot as an additional inducement to locate said school in said city, and he is authorized to make a deed to said regents of said normal school under the seal of said city, turning over, confirming and quitclaiming all right of the city to said lot to said regents of said school for said purpose, always provided said

Southeast Missouri Normal School shall be located in the city of Cape Girardeau and which said lot may be sold and disposed of as the said regents may see proper, to further the erection of the buildings necesary for said school within said city."

Also a deed dated November 13, 1873, executed pursuant to said ordinance, and purporting to convey lot H to the regents of the Southeast Missouri Normal School.

The plaintiff produced further evidence to the effect that the school was located in the City of Cape Girardeau in 1872 or 1873. The same evidence shows that the building was not located on the lot in question, but in another and different part of the city. Mr. Painter, the defendant, testified on the part of the plaintiff that he had been in possession of the lot for about ten years, that he made no claim of title to the premises and that they were of the rental value of three dollars per acre per annum. This was all the evidence produced, and on it the court gave judgment for the plaintiff.

The defendant objected to the deed from the city of Cape Girardeau to plaintiff, assigning as a reason therefor, that, under the terms of the deed from the Lorimier heirs to the inhabitants of the town, the present city of Cape Girardeau had no power to convey the premises to the plaintiff and that the deed was therefore void. This objection was overruled, both when the deed was offered in evidence and again by instructions given and refused. If the objection is well taken it disposes of this appeal.

The deed from the Lorimier heirs was made, it will be seen, in 1820. It may be that the town of Cape Girardeau had then been incorporated under territorial laws, but there is no evidence upon that subject in the record. We are not even informed by the record or briefs when or by what law the present city of Cape Girardeau was incorporated. We shall, however, assume that it is an incorporated city with the usual governmental powers and that it has power to hold real property and to sell the same when not dedicated to some particular use. Again the defendant in his brief says he is defending this case in the interest of the local public schools, but we find nothing to that effect in the pleadings or in the evidence. In short the case is before us on a very unsatisfactory record.

The owner of lands may devote and dedicate them to public use; and it is now well settled law that a dedication of lands to public use does not require the existence of a corporation in which to vest the title. Such a dedication will be valid without any specific grantee in existence at the time the dedication is made. The public is an ever-existing grantee, capable of taking a dedication for public uses. Rutherford v. Taylor, 38 Mo. 317; Trustees v. Council of Hoboken, 33 N. J. L. 16. The deed of the Lorimier heirs may, therefore, have full force and effect as a dedication of the various parcels of land therein described to public use, though the inhabitants of the town were not at the date thereof incorporated.

The Lorimier heirs by their deed conveyed the various parcels of land "to the inhabitants of the town aforesaid, collectively, for their use, benefit and behoof forever;" and of the particular lot now in question the deed says, "which lot including a large spring is destined for the establishment of a public school." There is the further clause to the effect that the several parcels of land "shall remain forever affected and appropriated to the public uses" to which they are devoted, and shall "never become private property."

It is clear from these clauses of the deed that the donors intended that this lot should be forever used by the inhabitants of the town for the establishment of a public school; that the lot itself should stand affected with and appropriated to that use, and that it should never become private property. Conceding that the present city of Cape Girardeau has invested in it as a corporation the right and power to manage and control this property, still it does not follow that it has the power to alien or convey the same. With the concession just made the city is but a trustee to manage the property for the uses and purposes to which it was devoted by the donors. It may control and regulate the use of the property, but it has no right to devote the same to private uses, or even to public uses different from those specified in the deed. Cummings v. The City of St. Louis, 90 Mo. 259. Where land has been dedicated to specific limited and defined purposes, the subject of the grant cannot be used for another and a different purpose. Price v. Thompson, 48 Mo. 361, citing with approval Warren v. The Mayor of Lyons City, 22 Iowa, 351.

But the plaintiff insists that the city by conveying this property to the plaintiff is carrying out the very purposes for which the lot was set apart by the Lorimier deed, and that the normal school is a public school within the meaning of that deed.

This normal school was established under the act of March 22, 1873 (Acts of 1873, p. 79), and is conducted under the provisions of article 3 of chapter 150, Revised Statutes, 1879. It is one of the three normal schools established in this state, the state being divided into three districts for such purposes. Section 7167 provides that the Board of Regents shall require applicants for admission "to sign and file with the secretary of the board a declaration of intention to follow the business of teaching in the public schools of the state. These schools, it will be seen, were established for the primary purpose of training and educating school teachers. While they are supported, in the main, from the public treasury and are part of the school system of this state, still we think it is clear they are not public schools within the meaning of the Lorimier deed. The grantors therein say they made it "more particularly for the convenience and encouragement of the inhabitants of the town of Cape Girardeau and of the owners of lots in and near the same."

The donors did not set this lot apart for the benefit of a few persons who might elect to follow a particular calling, but they intend it to be appropriated to a school which would be open to all, regardless of any declared intention to follow a particular avocation. That a school established in conformity with the Lorimier deed may be under the control of the laws concerning public schools we have no doubt; but we are also of the opinion that the donors used the words "public school" in a general and popular sense, and by it they meant a school which would be open to all of the inhabitants of the town. This being so the city had no right or power to convey the lot to the plaintiff. It could no more convey the lot to plaintiff than it could the other parcel called a public square. As said in Trustees v. Council of Hoboken, supra, when speaking of the powers of local authorities: "They cannot sell the lands so dedicated, nor release nor extinguish the use for which they were dedicated, nor employ them in any way variant from the purposes for which they were designed."

Our conclusion is that the deed from the city to the plaintiff was an effort on the part of the city to devote this property to purposes other and different from that contemplated by the donors, and that the deed is worthless and conveyed nothing. The city has no power to donate this property to plaintiff. The judgment is, therefore, simply reversed. All concur.

Note: Italics are used by respondent for convenience in pointing out matters involved in the case now under consideration, and the property called "a public square" in the foregoing opinion is the identical property sought to be condemned. (R. 611.)
